HE DIED FOR OTHERS.

AN ENGINEER STAYS IN HIS ENGINE AT HIS PERIL.

Train Dashes Into Train-Several Train Men Injured Severely and Many Head of Cattle and Hoge are Killed,

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 23.-A disastrous wreck occured this morning at 7:30 o'clock on the Kansas City, St. Joseph and Coun-cil Bluffs railroad, about three miles north of this city and a balf mile north of Mur-

Passenger train No. 11 started out on ne, with orders to meet and pass No. 26, freight train, at Murray's switch. When the passenger train reached Murray's switch there was a freight train on the sidetrack, which the passenger crew supposed to be No. 26, and accordingly went

But it was not 25 but No. 18, another freight train, and No. 26 was still out on the road puffing south toward Murray's switch with a long train of cattle, hogs and

The track north of Murray's switch at the scene of the wreck makes a bend, so that it is impossible to see more than a few yards ahead. The side of the track for miles is lined with a dense thicket of brush and small trees. A thick fog hung over the bottoms, and under these circumtances the two trains met.

They were close to each other when the trainmen first had any intimation that another train was coming. Both engineers whistled down brakes and the engineer and fireman of the freight engine jumped and suffered no worse injuries than a few light bruises and scratches. Henry Cuaingbam, the fireman of the passenger engine, also jumped and was severely bruised and dazed by the shock.

Stays at His Post. But Engineer J. W. Sager of the pas-senger train stayed in his cab, put on the brakes and reversed the engine. He had no sooner finished doing this than the collision occurred. He had no time to escape. He was caught in the wreck. The crash was terrible. The engineer was buried under the debris. He was scalded from head to foot, the skin falling from both arm and shoulders. He died several hours after in terrible suffering. The tender of the passenger engine was run right up in the baggage car. Orry Revenaugh, American Express company messenger, was in the car. He was badly hurt. F. B. Tanner, a newsboy, was sit-ting in the front end of the smoking car. He was severely cut by flying timbers. Conductor Tindell and Brakeman Cassle of the passenger crew were bruised, but their injuries are not serious. None of the freight crew was hurt except the en-gineer and fireman, who jumped.

Two or three freight cars were smashed to splinters. One car stood up on end on the ruins of two more. The two engines are a total wreck, being nothing more than pile of broken pieces of iron. The largest pieces recognizable are the boilers, which still retain something of their former shape. No cars of the passenger train were injured except the baggage car. Saved by Sager.

The heroic action of Engineer Sager in staying on his engine is what saved the lives of the passengers. If he had jumped the force of the passenger train would wreck and instead of hogs and cattle killed lozens of men and women would have found death in a few seconds.

Live Stock Smothered in Oats. The cattle cars smashed into cars containing corn and oats. Some of the ani-mals were smothered in the oats as it poured over them while they were held down by broken timbers.

Probably seven or eight freight cars are wrecked beyond repair and the two engines are totally demolished.

RUN IN AN OPEN SWITCH.

A Fast Burlington Passenger Train Wrecked in Illinois. GALESBURG, Ill., Oct. 22.-The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy fast passenger train, No. 5, which left here at 10:30 o'clock last night, was wrecked at the "pottery" switch near Monmouth, sixteen miles west of here, twenty-five minutes later. The train was running at a high rate of speed. There were on the engine Engineer A. A. Emery and Firemam Nels Anderson of this city and George Courtney, the traveling engineer, who went on the trip to see how the new locomotive worked. Anderson was blown from the cab by the steam. Emery and Courtney had no chance to escape, and their bodies were found close to the locomotive.

The baggageman and expressman were thrown across their cars, but miraculously escaped injury. A young man, Frank S. Johnson of Avon, who, with W. R. Hardy of Abingdon, was standing on the steps of the smoking car, attempted to jump off, was thrown under the wheels and killed. Hardy jumped and escaped injury.
In the first chair car back of the smoker, in a seat in the middle of the car, sat George Allen with his wife and baby. Mrs. Allen was next to the window and as the car tipped over her head was driven through the window and she was instantly killed. The baby was hurled across the car, and, save a cut on the head, was uninjured. Mr. Allen received only bruises. He found his baby first, then he groped his way from the car for a lantern and, returning, found his wife dead.

A large force of surgeons and railroad officials went from here and Burlington. In addition to those killed eighteen were injured, but the injuries of some were so slight that they left on the next train.

LAST DAY OF THE COUNCIL.

Closing Proceedings of the Ecumenics Methodist Conferences Washington, Oct. 20.—This is the last day of the great Ecumenical Methodist council and there is a widespread demand for some estimate of what its results are likely to be. To form such an estimate one must consider, first, the composition of the body and the limitations im posed upon it. Those who have expected it to formulate any scheme o legislation, or who have thought that it might commit Methodism, either as it whole or in its various parts, to any course contrary to present usage, must bear in mind that it has no power to do this. Its functions are purely deliberative and advisory. It may recommend a variety of things, if only it can agree upon them, but the adeption or rejection of what is suggested is a matter, which by common consent, has been left, not with this ecumeni-cal conference, but with the law making bodies of the twenty-eight churches which are taking part in the gathering. Another limitation is in the rule which stipulates that no vote shall be taken upon any question affecting the internal arrange-ments of any of these twenty-eight churches. Without such a proviso as this an ecumenical conference could not have been held, and the reader will readily see that, with such a proviso in force, the body, besides being denuded of legislative powers, is also restricted, to a very material extent, in even its doliberative and advisory prerogatives.

PRAISING THE AMERICANS.

English Delegate to the Council Writes to the London Papers. London, Oct. 20 .- The Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, in a long letter to the Chronicle, says he is delighted with the cordiality and the heartiness of the reception accorded the British delegates to the ecumenical conthe American speakers: "The peculiarly intense brotherliness existing among American Methodists in a quality charming and blessed, beyond all praise."

With reference to the opening meeting, he says: "The occasion, reviewing the gathering as a whole, was an impressive illustration of the resources and kindliness of American Methodism."

His Protection Views New York, Oct. 31.—An Ohio editor Democratic papers were parading him as an opponent of the McKinley bill, he replied as follows: John Hopley, Editor of the Journal, Buey-

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 14.-My Dear Sir: You inform me that the Democratic paper is your town and many Democratic papers throughout Onic keep the following paragraph standing in type: "But there is not a section or line in the cutire bill (McKinley tariff) that will open a market for another bushel of wheat or another barrel of pork."-James G. Blaine to Senator Frye,

July 11,1890. This sentence is garbled and taken from its proper connection. It creates a wrong impression. What I did say is the following: "I do not doubt that in many re-spects the tariff bill pending in the senate is a just measure, and that most of its provisions are in accordance with the wise policy of protection, but that there is not a section or line in the entire bill that will open a market for another bushel of wheat or another pound of pork." The letter in which this paragraph occurs was written to Senator Frye on July 11, 1890, and the McKinley bill did not become a law until October 1-nearly three months thereafter. In my letter to Senator Frye I objected to the bill because it did not contain a reciprocity clause, which would provide a market for wheat and pork, for other products of the farm and for various fabrics. Before the bill was finally passed the reciprocity clause was inserted and a large addition was made to the free list. It will therefore be seen from what I said in my letter that the objection which I made to the McKinley bill was entirely removed before the bill became a law.

Let me further say that the reciprocity clause has given ample market for many barrels of flour and many pounds of pork. Brazil, some months since, entered into a treaty by which many American articles are admitted free. Flour is made free and pork principal creditors of the government, but (which gives us the market) besides putting nearly 100 articles of Ameriof the government were men of can production on the free list.
